Mary B. Lloyd, MN '71
obituary

"In preparation for moving, I was reading old notes, cards, letters. I was looking through old photos and all the memories that flood with their presence.

I took special notice of Mary Lloyd's notes to me while an undergrad senior student in the UCLA School of Nursing, 1976. I decided to contact her, and by way of the magical internet, I could - but only to my stunned eye, to read, she had passed away in March of 2019. Mary Lloyd was a unique instructor, with her presence of talent in critical care content, and the ability to explain complex physiology and arrhythmia patterns in a meaningful and understandable manner. Mary loved to teach. Each encounter was this wonderful opportunity to share both knowledge and wisdom. And most important, the, "pearls", which as we all know, are based on a seasoned individual. She was caring, thorough, humorous, witty, engaging, present in the moment, theoretical- but with the talent to make the content practical and not scary! Genuine and warm. How fortunate I was to have her as my instructor for both a critical care semester, but even better was the semester elective I had created with her in the UCLA ER, one of the firsts to do so. We made that such a valuable experience for me, was not just the content, but the analysis of the patient experience in that setting. As I watched her provide care for patients, when she worked shifts on her own, there was this mastery that I aspired to obtain. Knowing full well, that would take time and the array of, "new grad mishaps", that would be coming my way! We stayed in touch after graduation, with cards, and the wonderful receiving of her wedding photo with John.

Few and far between are this meshing of so many admirable qualities, in both an RN, and an ordinary person as well.

Dr. Mary B. Lloyd, you are to be admired and honored."

*Robin Rosemark, RN, MN, CNS,
UCLA School of Nursing 1976*
