Nurses from Hong Kong Sanatorium & Hospital visit UCLA School of Nursing

Five nurses from Hong Kong Sanatorium and Hospital (HKS&H) participated in a clinical program sponsored by the School of Nursing. They spent two weeks experiencing different nursing units (Oncology, Medical Surgical, ICU) at Ronald Reagan UCLA Medical Center, as well as visiting Belmont Village Senior Living and the School of Nursing. This is part of a long-standing collaboration with HKS&H, one of the most prestigious and internationally accredited private hospitals in Hong Kong, to continue to enhance evidence-based practices and promote mentorship of nurses in conducting clinical research. The UCLA School of Nursing- HKS&H partnership has been generously funded through the generosity of UCLA alumnus Walton Li, MD '74, Chairman of the HKS&H Board of Directors and Medical Superintendent of the Hospital who is a strong advocate and supporter of the value of nursing care.
